

Top 5 Things to Pack in a Romantic Picnic Basket

So you are up to date 2 or 3, you have been out for coffee or dinner and you want to really impress on this date. Well with our spectacular weather we are having it has really inspired me to put this great little resource together.

First of all, everyone has different tastes so pay attention to what they have ordered. Do they have a sweet tooth or are they mad keen on seafood?

Now it also depends on who it is for. Male or Female? Again pay attention to what they order. If its beer gets a boutique beer that is a bit different. If its wine class it up and pack some really nice glasses. Also look at the beverage you are taking and make sure you can open it. (not that corks are that common anymore but lets say I have been there)

Crackers and dip... Always a winner in my books. But lash out and get some good stuff. Savoy is fantastic for the bbq at home but they don't really scream romance.

Seafood... be careful... I love seafood and again a real winner in my books...

If you put in a dozen good quality Australian prawns you will have a seafood lover instantly impressed.

Make sure you add a few little towels.

Cheese.... just 1 good cheese will do the trick. My fav at the moment is Mersy Vally tasty. It is soft and crumbly and to really make it extra flash and special get a little jar of local honey and drizzel over... yum yum yum

Prosciutto... nothing says quality like a $80 kg ham. Yep sounds expensive but really you only need a small amount.

If you fill your basket with quality and love you will surely impress.

If you don't you are with the wrong person. If your date does not appreciate you going the extra mile find a new date because this person is too hard to please. Fast forward 5 years and they will be exactly the same and every time you put in 100% you will be heartbroken and disappointed... who needs that.....

So i truly hope this helps you pack the perfect basket. And good luck.

Sarah ect ect